

Riding a bike for 40 minutes next to a road at 6°C without a hat on is truly a bad idea. You could've come back to the apartment once you felt how cold it is, but you thought: I can take it. Air physics in real life also meant that it's going to be much colder once you actually start riding. But you know, you're too cool for a hat, also, you're not going to ruin your perfect girlfriend sloppy rot-hair right? they are the perfect amount of oily and the hat would ruin it. Instead you ride the bike next to a busy road where semis are trying to dodge you and the potholes and you're trying to not think how your ears are going to freeze off any second now and how low-rise jeans and lace panties were not the best ideas and you're definitely showing off that whale tail whether you like it or not.